FY2003 Interoperable Communications Grant

Grant awards to purchase interoperable communications equipment were mailed to 73 jurisdictions across the state on July 23, 2004. The communities will be able to purchase interoperable communications systems that will allow emergency responders to better communicate with each other both at an incident site and with a local operations center.

"The interoperable communications grant will give local emergency responders the ability to use the compatible communications equipment to share critical lifesaving information. Local government response organizations have historically identified communications as a primary problem.

The State Emergency Management Agency (SEMA) earmarked $3.5 Million of the FY 2003 State Homeland Security Grant program money for Interoperable Communications. A peer group selection committee identified the most critical applications out of the $26 Million requested.
